SUBJECT.

Local & deputation allowances granted to the Superintendents & the Lt. Colonel Attendant

The Residency Surgeon (Lt. Col. Atkinson) is the only Commissioned Medical Officer who draws a local allowance in Nepal. The list required by para 2 of the Foreign & Pol. Depts letter of the 20 May 1915 may be sent regarding him. The allowance of Rs 200/- (which he is proposed to increase to Rs 400) is of a permanent nature.

4. The local allowances indicated in paragraphs 2 & 4 of the Lieut. General's letter could be classed in accordance with the H.Q's recommendations upon the points raised in para: 3 of that letter has been made clear. The local allowance of £16/- drawn by the Asst: Surgeons is apparently given on the analogy of that allowed to Warders under para 211 of the Burma Civil Medical Code. The extract of this paragraph may, in the first instance, be sent to the Rangoon Surgeon, for any report. Simply submitted for approval.

No. 1127 Est.A. 24/5

From

The Deputy Secretary to the Government of India
in the Foreign and Political Department,

To

The Hon'ble the Resident in Mysore.

Dated Simla, the 20th May 1915.

Sir,

I am directed to forward, for your information a copy of a letter from the Government of India in the Finance Department, No. 394-E.B., dated the 29th March 1915, communicating the decision that in future "remunerative local allowances" and "deputation allowances" which are granted in consideration of increased work or responsibility will count towards leave allowances and pension.

x With enclosures.

2. I am to request that the Government of India in the Foreign and Political Department may be furnished with complete lists, duly verified by the audit officer, of all existing local and deputation allowances (including settlement allowances) drawn by Political Officers and Commissioned Medical Officers in M y s o r e which have been been sanctioned by the Government of India or by His Majesty's Secretary of State for India. The authority for the grant of each allowance should be given, together with an expression of your opinion as to the category, whether "remunerative" or "compensatory" into which it properly falls. Orders as to the classification of these allowances will then be conveyed to you.

3. As regards all other classes of officers in the enjoyment of local or deputation allowances, the classification of their allowances should be determined by you, in consultation with the audit officer, in the manner laid down in paragraph 3(b) of the letter cited above, doubtful cases only being referred for the orders of the Government of India.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,

SIR,

I am directed to forward herewith a copy of the marginally noted correspondence with the Secretary of State for India, from which it will be seen that in future "remunerative local allowances", and "deputation allowances" which are granted in consideration of increased work or responsibility, will count towards leave allowances and pension.

1. Extract paragraph 2 of Despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 23 (Public Works), dated the 26th June 1914.
2. Despatch to the Secretary of State, No. 382, dated 8th October 1914.
3. Despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 131-Financial, dated the 11th December 1914.

2. The manner in which it is proposed to give effect to this decision, and the line of demarcation between local allowances and deputation allowances which should be taken into account for leave and pension purposes and those which should not, are indicated in the despatch to the Secretary of State of the 8th October 1914. Particular attention is also invited to the conditions stated in paragraph 2 of that despatch.

3. I am to request that action on the following lines may now be taken :—

(a) In all cases in which a local or deputation allowance is sanctioned in future the orders should specify whether it is intended to be remunerative or compensatory.

(b) Steps should be taken as early as possible, in communication with the audit officer, to settle whether existing local and deputation allowances belong to the "remunerative" or "compensatory" category. In the case of allowances granted partly on account of extra work or responsibility and partly on account of local considerations, it should be decided whether the grant has been mainly for the one purpose or the other and the allowance should be classed accordingly, all doubtful cases being referred for the orders of the Government of India.

(c) Provincial and departmental civil lists should, in accordance with paragraph 3 of the Secretary of State's despatch dated the 11th December 1914, show the correct classification of the allowances.

4. It will be seen from paragraph 6 of the Government of India's despatch dated 8th October 1914, to which the Secretary of State has signified his approval, that officers who retire or proceed on leave after 4th January 1915, the date on which his Lordship's orders were received, should be given the benefit, for the calculation of pension and leave allowances, of any local or deputation allowance drawn by them in the last three years, which under these orders is to count for pension and leave.

5. Finally I am to explain that the allowances which, under the orders now communicated, will in future count towards leave and pension may also be drawn by an officer on privilege leave, subject to the general rules which govern privilege leave salary. The test to be applied is whether the officer, while on privilege leave, retains a duty, lien upon the appointment to which a remunerative local allowance or remunerative deputation allowance has been attached. For example, where a remunerative local allowance is attached to a particular appointment and the officer holding the appointment ceases to perform the duties of the appointment in order to take privilege leave, he will not be entitled to the allowance unless the local Government is prepared to allow him to retain a lien on the appointment during his privilege leave. Similarly in the case of deputation allowances given to an officer on special duty in consideration of additional work or responsibility; if an officer who has been in receipt of such a deputation allowance takes privilege leave after completing his special duty, he will not be entitled to draw the deputation allowance while on privilege leave, since he would not have continued to draw the allowance if he had remained on duty.

6. The necessary amendments to the Codes and to the Audit Resolutions issued by the Government of India are under consideration, and will issue in due course. The Government of India have also under consideration a suggestion put forward by the Secretary of State that, in view of the differences between the two kinds of allowances, it would be convenient to use some entirely distinct term such as "duty allowance" to describe those allowances which are granted in consideration of increased work and responsibility.

I have, etc.,

(Sd.) N. V. RAGHAVAN,

Additional Assistant Secretary to the Government of India.

Copy of the foregoing letter and of the correspondence referred to therein forwarded to all Departments of the Government of India (including the Financial Adviser, Military Finance), to the Comptroller and Auditor General and other Heads of Departments under the Finance Department, to all Accountants General and Comptrollers, to all Examiners and Government Examiners of Railway Accounts, to the Examiner of Accounts, Military Works Services, and to the Audit Officer, Delhi Province.

By order, etc.,

2. As the allowance is clearly justified on the ground of heavier duties and greater responsibility, it should, in my opinion, count for leave allowances and pension; and, if Your Excellency sees no objection, this decision may apply henceforward to all remunerative, as distinguished from "compensatory" local allowances (vide paragraph 6 of my Financial Despatch, dated 26th May 1911, No. 59). It will be seen from paragraph 124 of the Report of the Decentralisation Commission that they considered allowances in respect of increased or arduous work or responsibilities to be essentially in the nature of salary, and in this view I agree.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

To

THE MOST HONOURABLE THE MARQUESS OF CREWE, K.G.,

His Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

Simla, the 8th October 1914.

MY LORD MARQUESS.

As promised in our telegram dated the 1st September 1914, we have the honour to reply to paragraph 2 of your despatch No. 23-P. W., dated the 26th June 1914, conveying your Lordship's view that "remunerative" local allowances should, if we see no objection, count towards leave allowances and pension.

2. We have considered the matter in all its bearings and are ready to accept this conclusion. In order, however, to obviate administrative difficulties which the introduction of this innovation may cause, we deem it advisable to cause it to be clearly indicated that the selection of an officer to a post which carries a local allowance will be subject to the conditions that his appointment thereto is a matter of pure selection, and that, if for reasons of administrative expediency it is subsequently decided to remove him from such a post, or not to send him back there on his return from leave, he has no ground of appeal so long as his grade or class pay is not affected.

3. As regards the distinction between local allowances which should be taken into account for leave and pension purposes, and those which should not, we agree with what has been already laid down in general terms by your Lordship at the outset of the last sub-paragraph of parapraph 6 of your despatch No. 59-Financial, dated the 26th May 1911, and in the despatch under reply, that the general line of demarcation should be that the only local allowances which should count for leave and pension are those given for additional work and responsibility, as distinguished from those given to meet expensive living or other special circumstances which do not affect the character of the officer's work. There will, however, be some cases in which a local allowance is granted partly for increased work and partly for higher cost of living. In such cases it would add to the complexity of audit to split up the allowance, and the best plan will, we think, be to decide whether it is given mainly for the one purpose or the other, and to treat it accordingly.

4. Deputation allowances, the subject of our telegram of the 1st instant referred to in paragraph 1, will follow the same principle. If they are given mainly by reason of increased work and responsibility they should count for leave and pension; if mainly by reason of extra expense caused to the officer as by his having to join a fresh station, it should not.

5. If the proposals made above commend themselves to your Lordship we propose to issue general instructions laying down that in all cases in which a local or deputation allowance is sanctioned the orders should specify whether it is intended to be remunerative or compensatory; while as regards the existing allowances, the audit officers should settle in consultation with local Governments and Administrations whether these belong to the remunerative or compensatory category, all doubtful cases being referred for the orders of the Government of India.

6. We would further propose that officers who retire or proceed on furlough after the receipt of your orders on this despatch may be given the benefit for pension and leave allowances of any local or deputation allowance drawn by them in the last three years which, under our proposals, will in future count for pension and leave.

We have the honour to be,

MY LORD,

Proposal that remunera ive local allowances and a certain kind of deputation allowances should count towards leave and pension allowances.

I have considered in Council the Letter of Your Excellency's Government, No. 382, Finance, dated 8th October 1914, and note your acceptance of my proposal that " remunerative " local allowances should count towards leave allowances and pension.

2. The proposals contained in your Letter for giving effect to this decision seem suitable, and I accordingly approve them. I also agree that deputation allowances should be treated on the same principle as local allowances as you propose in paragraph 4.

3. I shall be glad if Your Excellency will now take such action as may be necessary to incorporate these decisions in the Civil Service Regulations and other codes. You will also no doubt arrange that it should be made clear in the Departmental and Provincial Civil Lists whether particular local allowances or deputation allowances drawn by individual officers are of the " remunerative " or " compensatory " character.*

In continuation of my letter No.670 dated 3rd July 1915 I have the honour to forward herewith a copy of letter No.87/4878 dated 21st July 1915 received from the Personal Assistant to the Surgeon-General with the Government of Madras, Madras, regarding the local allowance referred to by the Accountant-General, Madras.

2. The 3 local allowances of Rs 10/- each sanctioned to Sub Assistant Surgeons attached to the Bowring Civil Hospi-tal, Bangalore, are on account of costly living in Bangalore and also for the heavy work required which is in no way less onerous than that of similar appointments in Madras.

3. This local allowance may be treated as compensatory.

With reference to your letter No.675 dated 3rd July 1915, I have the honour to inform you that the local allowance of Rs10 granted to Sub Assistant Surgeons employed in the Presidency State Hospitals is, for the costliness of the living in Madras and also for the heavy work required of them in the Presidency town when compared with their duties in the Mufassal. These Sub-Assistant Surgeons moreover do not receive the charge allowance of Rs10 admissible under paragraph 209, Civil Medical Code, when employed in Madras. The allowance is therefore more compensatory than remunerative.

SIR,

In continuation of paragraph 6 of Mr. Raghavan's letter No. 394-E.B.

dated the 29th March 1915, I am directed to forward copies of the marginally cited correspondence with the Secretary of State and to state that, in accordance with the decisions arrived at therein, in future—

'Finance Department despatch to Secretary of State, No. 33, dated 5th February 1916.
Despatch from Secretary of State, No. 21-Finl., dated 7th April 1916, received 26th April 1916.

(1) The terms "duty allowance" and "local allowance", respectively, should be used to describe the two classes of local allowances at present known as "remunerative" and "compensatory".

(2) Deputation allowances should be described by the terms "deputation (duty) allowance" and "deputation (local) allowance" according as they are granted mainly for increased work and responsibility or mainly in consideration of a change of station.

(3) Temporary rates of pay granted in consideration of increased work and responsibility in lieu of substantive pay plus deputation (duty) allowance will count for leave allowances and pension. This decision will not have retrospective effect.

2. I am to add that the necessary amendments to the Codes and Government of India Audit Resolutions in consequence of these orders will be issued in due course.

Despatch No. 33, dated Delhi, the 5th February 1916.

From—The Government of India, Finance Department,

To—The Secretary of State for India.

We have the honour to refer to the correspondence ending with Lord Crewe's despatch No. 131-Financial, dated the 11th December 1914, on the subject of remunerative local and remunerative deputation allowances.

2. The decision that these allowances will count towards leave allowances and pension was communicated to local Governments and Administrations in our Finance Department's letter No. 394-E.B., dated the 29th March 1915, of which a copy is enclosed. In accordance with the direction in paragraph 3 of Lord Crewe's despatch, steps are being taken to show in provincial and departmental civil lists whether particular local and deputation allowances drawn by individual officers are of the "compensatory" or "remunerative" character.

3. We have since had under consideration the question of the new terminology suggested in paragraph 3 of Lord Crewe's despatch. We agree that the terms "duty allowance" and "local allowance" can conveniently and suitably be adopted to denote the two classes of local allowances now described as "remunerative" and "compensatory". We have also considered how far this terminology should be applied to the case of deputation allowances which similarly fall into two classes, namely, those granted mainly for increased work and responsibility, and those granted mainly in consideration of a change of station. The former we propose to describe as "deputation (duty) allowances", the latter as "deputation (local) allowances". We do not, however, propose any modification of the existing powers of the Government of India or local Governments in the matter of sanctioning deputation (local) allowances.

4. We have also considered the question whether temporary rates of pay, granted in lieu of substantive pay plus deputation allowance should be treated as counting for leave allowances and pension. We are of opinion that such cases should be treated in precisely the same manner as those in which deputation allowances are granted in consideration of increased work and responsibility, and that the additional salary granted in such cases should count for leave allowances and pension.

5. The amendments of the Civil Service Regulations and the Civil Account Code are being deferred pending receipt of your final orders.

SIR,

In Mr. Gubbay's letter No. 592-E.B., dated the 9th June 1916, it was stated that temporary rates of pay granted in consideration of increased work and responsibility in lieu of substantive pay plus deputation (duty) allowance would count for leave allowances and pension. At the same time it was added that this decision would not have retrospective effect. S. 38/a

2. I am directed to explain that the condition as to retrospective effect excludes from the operation of these orders all officers who retired or proceeded on leave before the 26th April 1916, the date on which the orders of the Secretary of State were received. But in calculating the pensions or leave allowances of all officers who retired or proceeded on leave on or after the 26th April 1916, it will be permissible to take into account the temporary rates of pay drawn by such officers during the three years preceding their retirement or departure on leave.

FROM

G. RAINY, ESQ., I.C.S.,

Offg. Deputy Secretary to the Government of India,

TO

ALL LOCAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.

Dated Simla, the 17th February 1917.

SIR,

Under the orders contained in the letters from this Department No. 394-E.B., dated 29th March 1916, and No. 592-E.B., dated 7th June 1916, duty and deputation (duty) allowances paid from general revenues count for leave allowances and pension. The Government of India have now considered to what extent such allowances should count when an officer has been allowed to devote part of his time to a foreign employer from whom he receives a duty allowance.

2. The work done for the foreign employer is not usually under Government management or control and in performing the work the officer does not act under the orders of Government. Such cases therefore are analogous to foreign service of the first kind. The leave allowances and pensions of officers on foreign service of the first kind are calculated on an assumed pay and not on the salaries they actually receive, and the pensions and leave allowances of the officers are not therefore affected by any increased remuneration which they may draw while on foreign service. The Government of India consider, therefore, that when an officer, though not on foreign service, is permitted to receive a duty allowance from a foreign employer, that allowance cannot ordinarily count for leave allowances and pension. Exceptional cases may, however, occur which resemble rather foreign service of the second kind. These the Government of India will be prepared to consider on their merits, but subject to the condition in all cases that the foreign employer is willing to pay leave and pension contributions at the rates laid down in Article 770, Civil Service Regulations, from the time the allowance begins to be drawn by the officer. It follows that allowances already sanctioned when drawn by the present incumbents cannot count, since no arrangement for the payment of contributions was made at the outset, and the foreign employer cannot equitably be called on to pay contributions in arrear.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Simla, the 15th December 1918.

SIR,

In paragraph 5 of Mr. Raghavan's letter, No. 394-E.B., dated the 29th March 1915, it was explained that certain allowances, which, under the orders contained in that letter, would in future count towards leave and pension, might also be drawn by an officer on privilege leave subject to the general rules which govern privilege leave salary. In amplification of this point it was stated that, where a duty allowance was attached to a particular appointment and the officer holding the appointment ceased to perform its duties in order to take privilege leave, he would not be entitled to the allowance unless the local Government was prepared to allow him to retain a lien on the appointment during his privilege leave.

2. Under the orders quoted above the sanction of the local Government is necessary in every case before an officer can draw a duty allowance while on privilege leave, and it has been represented that this arrangement involves some unnecessary correspondence, which could be dispensed with if the decision were left to the authority which granted the leave. This suggestion has been accepted by the Government of India, and I am directed to say that for the future the decision whether an officer on privilege leave does or does not retain a lien on an appointment carrying the duty allowance will rest with the authority which granted the leave. Similarly the drawing of a deputation (duty) allowance during privilege leave may be sanctioned by the authority which would have been competent to allow the deputation having regard to the extra period involved by the officer deputed taking leave.

3. The Government of India believe that some local Governments have found difficulty in determining when an officer should be deemed to retain a lien on a particular appointment carrying a duty allowance. The matter is not one in which definite and binding rules applicable to all cases can be laid down, but as the powers of local Governments in this matter will now sometimes in future be exercised by subordinate authorities, it is considered desirable to communicate general instructions for the guidance of all concerned.

4. The fundamental principle, which is of general application, is that no officer can increase his remuneration by taking leave, i.e., an officer's leave allowances cannot exceed the remuneration he would receive if on duty. It follows that in certain cases an officer cannot draw a duty or deputation (duty) allowance on privilege leave. Thus for example it was pointed out in Mr. Raghavan's letter referred to above that, if an officer who had been drawing a deputation (duty) allowance took privilege leave after completing his special duty, the deputation allowance would not be admissible during such leave. Similarly a settlement officer or assistant settlement officer cannot draw a settlement allowance during privilege leave if the settlement operations on which he was engaged have been brought to an end. It is obvious also that no officer can have a lien on an appointment which has been abolished or is held in abeyance.

On the other hand if an officer holds an appointment substantively and will resume it on the termination of his leave, or if he is on deputation and it is intended he should on return from leave take up the same special duty, it may ordinarily be assumed that he retains a lien. The doubtful cases are those which occur when the officer on leave has been officiating in the appointment carrying the duty allowance, or when it is known that the officer will not on return from leave resume his appointment or special duty.

5. In determining whether or not an officiating officer retains a lien on an appointment carrying a duty allowance the criterion to be applied is that laid down in article 210, Civil Service Regulations, in the analogous case of acting allowances. Thus for example if the officer is relieved by the permanent incumbent of the appointment he obviously cannot retain a lien on it. If, however, he is replaced by another officiating officer the question would be whether that officer had a superior lien or not. If it is known when the officer takes leave that he will not return to the appointment, permission to draw the allowance during privilege leave should not be granted by any authority lower than the local Government. In deciding whether or not an officer may be granted the allowance local Governments should specially consider whether, if the officer had remained on duty, he would have been displaced by the officer who relieves him.

6. When an officer on special duty takes privilege leave and it is known he will not return to it, he should not in any circumstances be allowed to draw a deputation (duty) allowance during such leave. A deputation is a purely personal matter and if an officer quits it with the knowledge he will not return, he must also quit the emoluments, since so far as he is concerned the special duty is at an end.

In accordance with certain corrections in the Civil Service Regulations which will be issued shortly, increased remuneration drawn in temporary appointments of unlike character to existing permanent appointments and also certain settlement allowances will be classed as deputation (duty) allowances. The instructions in this paragraph will apply to the former but in order to secure uniformity in the treatment of settlement allowances (some of which are classed as 'duty') local Governments will exercise the same powers as regards them as they do in the case of duty allowances attached to permanent appointments.

7. The tenure of an officer holding an appointment carrying a duty allowance is sometimes limited to a specified term, and doubt has been felt whether the allowance can be drawn on privilege leave after the term has expired. To extend the term solely for the purpose of enabling the officer to draw the duty allowance attached to the appointment might often be inadmissible. But in most cases, where a time limit is attached to the tenure of a particular appointment, this is done as a mere matter of general administrative convenience, and it is open to the authority which fixed the term in the first instance to extend it. A valid reason for granting an extension would often be that the officer had been prevented by the public exigencies from taking privilege leave before the time limit had expired. The extension of an officer's tenure in these circumstances, however, should not be sanctioned by any authority lower than the local Government.

8. I am to explain in conclusion that the Government of India have no desire to fetter the discretion which local Governments possess to withhold the allowance if they do not consider that the officer on privilege leave should retain a lien on his appointment. It will also be open to local Governments to issue such subsidiary instructions as they may consider necessary for the guidance of their own officers.

9. If an audit officer considers that in any case the orders issued by an authority subordinate to the local Government are open to question, he may ask that the sanction of the local Government should be obtained.
